

Dragisa Mijacic is an Executive Director of InTER and a PhD candidate at the Maastricht Graduate School of Governance, Maastricht University, the Netherlands, with the research focus on governance and development. He holds a joint Master degree in development studies from the University of Trento and Free University of Bozen/Bolzano, Italy. Parallel to the academic advancement, Mr. Mijacic has been working as a policy researcher and development consultant, providing services to many development organizations, such as the European Commission, UNDP, USAID, OECD, GIZ, Sida, OSCE, ADA, JICA, OSI, IOM, as well as to national, regional and local governments, universities, private sector entities and civil society organizations across the Southeast Europe. Mr. Mijacic has an excellent research and publication portfolio in the broad field of local and regional development, decentralization & governance, business support infrastructure, strategic planning, as well as in the field of efficient use of development aid and public expenditures through evaluation processes.